Tickets On Sale For Dallas Symphony

Reserved seat tickets are on sale at Cameron Chamber offices for the January 11 evening performance of the Dallas Symphony Orchestra, Anshel Brusilow conducting.

Tickets are being sold in two sections, A and B, for the performance Tuesday, January 11, which features cello soloist Ralph Kirshbaum.

All seats are reserved and are $2.50 each, according to Mrs. Barbara Smitherman, Chamber manager. Two student performances are scheduled during the afternoon in separate concerts for CISD and other area students grade one through six and seven through high school.

Officials noted no student tickets, as such, will be sold at student prices Tuesday night because of the special student concerts, also to be given by the Symphony.

Tickets may be reserved by calling Cameron 697-2541 or Rockdale 446-5822. They must be paid for and picked up by January 7, Friday, by 5 p.m.

DEMAND GROWING

"Demand is already growing in Rockdale, Temple and Cameron for the Symphony evening tickets," according to Frank M. Luecke, Symphony committee chairman.

Monroe Fuchs, Cameron civic leader is heading a committee developing a Symphony program. Mrs. Judy McDaniel and Miss Christine Laws head the Libary Friend's evening reception and liason with Yoe High School Honor Society members ushering the afternoon student performances.

The Cameron Chamber is sponsoring a brunch-reception for Symphony personnel about noon January 11. Robert Ellett, Don G. Humble and Gene Blake are executive committee planners for the Chamber's part in the Symphony appearance, made possible by contributions from National Endowment of the Arts, the Alcoa Foundation, Cameron Independent District and other Milam school districts.

EVENING PROGRAM

The evening program includes:

Two Wagnerian excerpts Introduction to Act III, "Lohengrin," and Prelude and Liebestod from "Tristan Und Isolde."

Also assisting the Symphony plans in January are First United Methodist Church, the Arts and Service League, Cameron unit of Army National Guard, Yoe High School band and Band boosters, who are sponsoring a clinic January 12 at YHS Band Hall given by first chair players of woodwind, brass and percussion sections of the 80-piece orchestra.

POLICE REPORT TWO BREAKINS

The Cameron Junior High School was broken into Tuesday night and equipment valued at nearly $600 was taken, but police arrested a suspect in the case and recovered the goods.

Arrested and charged with burglary was Danny Colbert of Cameron. The police staked out the building and caught him in the act, according to Police Chief Felipe Martinez.

Will Ondrej's blacksmith shop was also broken into and an assortment of tools and a coffee pot were taken. Police are still investigating the breakin.

GRAPEFRUIT TREE in Central Texas is a rare sight, especially one that bears fruit. The A. N. Weems home place at 505 E. First has a tree that bore four pink grapefruit. The tree is 30 years old and had been cut back each year until this one, when it was allowed to grow. The three sisters shown here are from left, Mrs. Alphine Barmore, Mrs. Grady Little, and Mrs. Aubrey Bridges.

Nominations Open For Civic Award

Nomination forms have been mailed to all local organizations to submit their choice for the annual McCullin Civic Award.

The award is presented to the outstanding citizen each year and is based on three major phases of community interests: contribution to the spiritual life of the community; influence for good for the youth of the community; and contribution to civic, cultural, and commercial life of the community.

After all nominations are submitted the final selection is made by a secret committee composed of representatives from each group making a nomination.

Those who have received the award in the past are: E. A. Perrin, Rev. John Solomon, Mrs. Mark C. Magers, Jimmy Asher, Lester Williams, Ben Magness, Mrs. Dana Monroe, Richard Moseley, Francis Cox, Dr. S. H. Richardson, Don G. Humble, Narvie Caperton, Forrest Sapp, Gene Smitherman, Miss Mildred Thornton, Mrs. W. O. Triggs, Albert Collins, Felix Matula Jr., A. W. McCullin Sr., and last year's winner, Fredwill Hornung.

The award was donated in 1951 by Mr. and Mrs. A. W. McCullin Sr.

Robbers Hit Two Stations

Two local service stations were the targets for robberies over the weekend, and three persons were arrested in connection with the robberies.

Cameron Police Chief Felipe Martinez, Sgt. Ken Butler, and night watchman Ruben Cole foiled an armed robbery getaway when they drove up to Hughes Texaco station right after it was robbed of $62, about 11:30 Sunday night.

The Chief said it was "one chance in a million" that it could happen the way it did, with the police spotting the robber with a cardboard box over his head and armed with a rifle.

They arrested James Frank Halpain of Conroe, who had taken the money at gunpoint from Gavino Acosta, the station's night attendant.

Halpain was arrested between the station and a neighboring church. He was turned over to county authorities.

The other holdup was Friday night at Sanders Enco station on Highway 77, where three men took about $90 from the station cash register after knocking down the attendant, Charlie Barfield, with a karate chop. They also kicked the fallen man.

A local resident, Alton Logan, drove up and the men jumped in their car and drove off. Logan took the license number and two of the men were arrested in Chilton. The third man is still at large and the money was not recovered.

County authorities charged Lawrence Washington and Jessie Ford with robbery. Washington was freed on $3,000 bond and Ford is still in county jail.

Auto Mishap Fatal

Charley White, 64, of Cameron, was killed Friday about 9 a.m. when he missed an intersection in heavy fog and was thrown from his pickup.

Investigating Patrolman Milton Wright said White was traveling south on Farm Road 979 at Maysfield, and missed the intersection of Highway 190.

White was thrown from his pickup and struck a utility pole. Heavy fog kept the accident from being discovered for over an hour, Wright said.

Several minor traffic accidents were investigated during the weekend, but no injuries were reported.

Cameron police reported an accident that occurred Sunday, when cars driven by Manuel V. Martinez of Snyder and Edgar Wilson Barfield collided on Highway 77.

Seven occupants in the Martinez car were taken to the hospital by ambulance, and Barfield and a passenger were also taken to the hospital. They all were treated and released, except for one Martinez girl, who was transferred to Scott and White, Temple.

Another accident was reported on South College St. when a car driven by Dennis Ruzicka went out of control and overturned. Ruzicka was taken to a local hospital. Extent of his injuries was unknown.

Babson Sees 1972 As Year Of Progress

By Babson Reports, Inc.

WELLESLEY HILLS, Mass. A year ago our Forecast for 1971 looked hopefully toward a better business year than had prevailed in 1970. Unfortunately, the trouble spots we cited combined to frustrate the possibilities offered by the favorable forces. For example, the vexing problems of high unemployment, underutilization of industrial productive capacity, dangerous inflationary pressures, the huge federal budget deficit, and labor problems did indeed raise barriers to economic progress in 1971.

1971 -- ANOTHER CRISIS YEAR

As we look back upon 1971, therefore, we can justly label it another "crisis year", just as 1969 and 1970 had been. However, the crises of the previous two years were largely of a domestic economic nature, albeit the burden of the Veitnam war was a contributing influence to the dislocations. In 1969 the main villain was the grinding credit crunch; in 1970 it was the harrowing corporate liquidity squeeze, plus two major strikes and the surprise of the foray into Cambodia.

In 1971 the focal point was more the "flight from the American dollar" in the leading foreign exchange markets of the free world. This crisis had been building for many years, and it also had been inexorably linked with a complex of other problems.

These included cost-push inflation, a steady weakening of the U.S. foreign trade position, and the long succession of federal budget deficits and imbalances in our international payments position -- which resulted from our foreign aid and military programs plus sizable private spending and investments abroad. There was also the aggravation of the long and costly strikes during 1971; but in the final analysis, the real havoc was wrought by the dollar's troubles.

STABILIZATION OR TRAUMA?

In a counteroffensive to combat the dollar's woes, to bridle the inflationary spiral, and to revitalize the nation's economy, the Nixon Administration took everyone by surprise by dramatically reversing its economic approach. In the first phase of the new program, President Nixon imposed a 90-day emergency freeze upon prices, wages, and rents. In addition, he asked Congress to move to an earlier date the planned revision of the federal income tax structure so as to increase consumer disposable income, and to grant a tax credit for certain business capital expenditures. He also imposed a 10 percent surcharge on certain imports of foreign goods.

Initially, public reaction was favorable. The program was regarded as a positive step in coming to grips with the vital problems afflicting the economy. However, the piecemeal fashion in which the second phase of the program was unveiled left consumers, businessmen, and investors in an uncertain frame of mind. Doubts mounted as early lukewarm labor acceptance of the program turned to antagonism, and as industrial activity, consumer spending, and unemployment failed to respond as quickly as had been anticipated.

VESTIGES OF HOPE

On the surface, the disappointing economic results of 1971 would seem to point to a year of inept failures. A deeper analysis reveals grounds for a contrary view. Even though business and employment did not respond as the Nixon Administration had anticipated, there were extenuating circumstances which critics of the new economic game plan have been remiss in considering.

For example, there was the protracted tie-up of West Coast ports, and subsequently a virtual paralysis of East Coast and many Gulf Coast ports, which exacted a toll on the economy. In addition, there were the coal and copper miners' strikes, and the inescapable liquidation of strike-hedge steel inventory stockpiles. These retardant factors would have exerted adverse influences even if the Administration had not opted for "controls".

Furthermore, the fainthearted miracle seekers and the opportunistic politicians may be premature in labeling the Nixon economic game plan an exercise in futility. There has not been enough time to gauge the results of this program. After all, Congress has been agonizingly slow in acting on those facets of the program which are beyond the jurisdiction of the President.

1972 -- YEAR OF PROGRESS

AT THIS OUTSET OF THE NEW YEAR, THEREFORE, THE STAFF OF BABSON'S REPORTS VIEWS CONSTRUCTIVELY THE PROSPECT OF WHAT LIES IN STORE FOR THE ECONOMY. We are hopeful that the Administration's economic game plan will jell sufficiently to encourage businessmen and consumers to sluff off their cocoons of cautiousness and assume a more optimistic perspective. Such an improvement in public confidence, after the long siege of uncertainty of the past three years, should produce a definite pattern of business improvement.

It would be well not to expect an immediate return of boom conditions for the economy as a whole. The fight against inflation will require continuing vigilance and therapy, and with the large reservoir of idle productive capacity in American industry the task of paring unemployment will require patience. The Nixon Administration's economic program was not set forth as one which would produce deflation, but rather one which would restrain inflationary pressures sufficiently to create productivity gains and make for solid progress in the economy, as opposed to the illusory gains of recent years when price inflation accounted for much of the advance. So, to the extent that inflation is curtailed, Babson's Reports forecasts that 1972 will emerge as a period of geniune achievement.

LESS WORRISOME CLIMATE

The primary characteristic which the staff of Babson's Reports expects will mark 1972 and enable the economy to regain its forward thrust in the next twelve months is an anticipated easing in certain troublesome areas. The major labor groups are tied to multi-year contracts, and the next "go around" is not scheduled until 1973. Hence, on the labor front, it will be a year of relative quiet on the part of the major unions, whose walkouts can be quiet debilitating to the economy. To further brighten the background picture for the coming year, we anticipate no real money and credit worries for the better part of 1972.

Even as demand for money and credit increases in pace with the projected improvement in economic activity, the monetary authorities are well situated to pump in additional credit to meet legitimate business needs, thus obiviating the liklihood of another restrictive credit crunch. Corporate liquidity in general has been bolstered quite significantly during the past two years; thus, except for the marginal companies which have trouble securing credit under most circumstances, the threat no longer looms of businesses being pushed to the wall.

We must also remember that even though the tax incentives have been extremely slow in gaining congressional approval, it is very likely that initial benefits to the economy will be seen by the end of the first quarter of 1972. Moreover, the Administration will strive to impart more zip to the economy because of the national elections coming up in the fall of 1972.

Probably one method will be to increase attempts to stimulate trade with hitherto restricted Communist countries. One thing is true, however -- that the Nixon Administration in girding for 1972's elections does not have the latitutde to stimulate the economy which other incumbent Administrations have had in the past, due to the grave budget deficit problem. Nevertheless, the healthier background climate prevailing should produce a greater willingness to spend on the part of consumers. Some pickup in retail trade surfaced in the latter part of 1971, albeit on a spotty basis.

Improve consumer demand, higher inventory requirements as a result of a more buoyant level of general business, and the incentive of the investment tax credit should bring management thinking around toward policies emphasizing the expansion of inventories and increases in capital spending.

THE IFFY FEATURES

At this juncture, there are some important iffy aspects to the 1972 outlook. As 1971 drew to a close, however, some of these vital issues did take a turn for the better. But until they are actually resolved, these adverse factors will exert some dampening influence on public sentiment. The most important change for the better was the monetary situation. The leading free world nations achieved a meeting of the minds and realigned their currency parities. The American dollar was devalued 8.57 percent via an increase in the official price of gold, while stronger foreign currencies were revalued upward formally. On the other hand, it will require a little time to hammer out new trade agreements providing for a more equitable climate for American goods in foreign markets. Until the trade agreements are revised, foreign commerce will remain a tenuous area.

INFLATION VS. DEFLATION

The shift in Nixon's economic strategy last summer never did include a goal of deflating the economy. Rather, the object was to restrain the dangerous pace of inflation, which had been accelerating during 1969, 1970, and the first half of 1971. Therefore, once again the staff of Babson's Reports rules out deflation in the coming year. However, we no longer regard inflation as "Public Enemy No. 1", as we did in our forecasts for 1970 and 1971.

But it would be unrealistic to expect an equilibrium between inflationary and deflationary forces. Instead, what we look for is a moderate degree of inflation on both price and cost fronts. Buffers against a return to hyper-inflation are expected to be the monitoring on the part of the Federal Government and, for the better part of the year, the carryover of 1971's record farm production, plus the large reservoir of unused industrial productive capacity.

One must remember also that despite the generous wage concessions to the coal miners, the railroad signalmen, and others, the major labor union contracts are going into either their second or their third years. In multi-year contracts, the labor cost increase is usually "front-end loaded," which means that almost half the total increment of the contract is granted in the first year, so that each of the succeeding two years has substantially smaller labor cost increases by comparison.

The most difficult area of inflationary potential which faces the country in 1972 is that of public finance. The Federal Government in the fiscal year which ends June 30, 1972 will find it hard to improve on the horrendous deficit of $23.2 billion for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1971. Indeed, unless Congress shows greater spending restraint, the federal budget is in jeopardy of "falling into the red" by well over $30 billion in this fiscal year. As the next fiscal year unfolds, President Nixon's inability to hold overspending to a tolerable level might haunt him and the Republican Party in the elections of 1972.

DOLLAR DEVALUATION

The devaluation of the American dollar near the end of 1971 took place pretty much in line with the expectations of the Babson's Reports staff, at 8.57 percent in terms of the official price of gold. Moreover, the multi-national currency realignment process was pretty much what the Babson staff had anticipated, and Hurry! Reserve Tickets...

Tickets are now on sale for reserved seats only for the Dallas Symphony's appearance the evening of Tuesday, January 11, at National Guard Armory.

Considerable leadership is developing an impressive two-day appearance of the Symphony, capped by the public evening performance and clinic for YHS band the next day.

Activity by the Cameron Chamber and Library Friends supported by financial commitments from Alcoa Foundation, National Endowment of the Arts, Cameron ISD and numerous individuals are making all this possible.

Assistance is assured by Yoe High School Honor Society, First United Methodist, Cameron's National Guard unit.

Tickets are $2.50 each for the evening performance of Wagner, Tchaikovsky, Ravel, Richard Strauss and Rimskey Korsakov, including cello soloist Ralph Kirshbaum.

Tickets are only available on reserved seat basis through the Cameron Chamber office. Rockdale residents wanting to reserve seats may call Cameron direct through to Camp Insurance adjacent to Cameron Chamber offices.

Work is also beginning on sponsor spots on a souvenir program for the evening performance. Patron spots are only $5 and will defray costs of chair emplacement, insurance and other items figuring in hosting the 85-piece Dallas Symphony.

With tickets only $2.50 each (no student ticket prices because of limited space and student performances during the day) people should realize what a bargain a full symphony performance, including soloist is. It should be a packed house. Seats for a Dallas concert go from $3.50 to $8.50 for similar performances.

It would be well to call Cameron 697-2541 today before the ticket supply dwindles. Sponsors are expecting a "standing - room - only" crowd from around Central Texas.

OLD PHILOSOPHER

Dear editar:

It's that time of year again to look back over the past twelve months and ahead to the next twelve.

Personally, I'm about as good at telling what's going to happen as what did, like a state legislature waiting for the courts to tell it what the laws it just passed meant, and my prediction for 1972 is that most predictions will be about as reliable as the one made in 1910, by the man who said that when automobiles replace horses and buggies most flies will be eliminated.

Or the college professors in Italy who predicted Columbus would sail off the end of the earth.

Or any President in the last 25 years who predicted a balanced budget.

I know there are a lot of gloomy predictions for 1972 and the years ahead, one of which is that man will go up in smoke when a hydrogen bomb war breaks out or he'll sufficate in pollution, taking all living things with him.

I doubt this, I predict both man and alligator will be around for a long time to come, and that goes for flies and mosquitoes as well as China and Russia and the United States and all the continents and the seven seas with Cameron thrown in for good measure.

I have utmost confidence in the survival of man as long as he remembers the fundamental lesson of life: just keep dodging and don't look back.

Yours faithfully,
J. A.

Washington, D.C. -- The following letters were recently answered by the Department of State:

ST. STEPHEN'S CROWN

Does the United States still have possession of the crown of St. Stephen, the founder of Hungary?

J.T.C.
Beverly Hills, Calif.

Dear J.T.C.:

Although the Crown is the property of the Hungarian nation and a Hungarian national treasure, we gained custody of the Crown toward the end of World War II. It has not been returned to Hungary because unsettled conditions within Hungary and chronic strains in U.S. Hungarian relations made consideration of the Crown's return inappropriate and inopportune over a long period of years. The Crown has remained in our trust and safeguard.

As our relations with Hungary have gradually improved in recent years and discussions have been carried on toward the setletment of various long-standing bilateral problems, the Hungarian Government has raised the question of the Crown's return. This subject will continue to be a matter of interest to both Governments, but we are concerned that the eventual return of the Crown should occur when substantial improvement in the atmosphere and status of our relations with Hungary is established.

TURKISH OPIUM

What are the terms of the recent agreement between the United States and Turkey regarding the ban on the production of opium?

R.J.G.
St. Louis, Mo.

Dear R.J.G.:

Since President Nixon has declared a national offensive against drug abuse, we have been devoting considerable effort to eliminate the illegal production and traffic in drugs.

On June 30, the Turkish Government showed a strong sense of international responsibility by making the difficult decision to ban opium cultivation, beginning in the fall of 1972, in order to help the Turkish Government in overcoming the problems of the transition involved in eliminating a crop which the country is entitled to produce and which provides a livelihood for many farmers, we will provide technological and financial assistance for crop-substitution research and other similar programs. We are also considering other assistance to help offset the foreign exchange losses which the Turkish Government will suffer due to the loss of opium as a legal export commodity.

Under Turkish law, farmers must be given one year's notice before opium-poppy planting can be prohibited in areas where cultivation has been permitted. Prime Minister Nihat Erim has told us he will take every measure to eliminate smuggling and will undertake a program to induce farmers, who are legally permitted to plant poppies in the fall of 1971, to voluntarily abstain from planting. Beginning in the fall of 1972, the opium poppy will be banned throughout Turkey.

We have also been encouraged by other recent evidence of the Turkish Government's intention to prevent Turkish opium from entering illicit channels. Measures which have been taken to insure collection of the total production from this year's harvest will result, we believe, in a much improved performance. These measures include training of additional narcotics agents, an increase in the purchase price of the opium gum, a provision for the advance cash payments to farmers, and collection of the gum at the farm immediately after harvest.

Enforcement efforts are also showing improved results.

"Low Down" FROM THE Congressional Record

By JOE CRUMP

(A Column for Readers Who Haven't Time to Review the Congressional Record Daily)

ABOUT THOSE EXILES

REP. MICHAEL HARRINGTON (Mass.) ". . . Between 20,000 and 60,000 young Americans have emigrated to other countries in order to avoid fighting in a war in which they do not believe. What will happen when the war ends and these men want to return home?. . .

"Mr. Koch has defined the problem and brought to light a situation which we cannot and should not ignore any longer. . ." (Mr. Koch's condensed article from THE NEW YORK TIMES follows):

WASHINGTON. -- This problem should be resolved as soon as American troops are no longer fighting in Vietnam. Otherwise for more than a generation to come there will be bitterness, unhappiness and family tragedy. There are difficult issues of public policy, philosophy and fairness involved. The legitimate feelings of those who served in Vietnam, many of whom opposed the war, and the families of those who lost their lives there and in other wars cannot be ignored. Nevertheless, the problem can be approached constructively if the following premises are accepted.

First, we should eschew the juvenile shibboleths and rhetoric of extremists on both left and right -- those that espouse views that America should apologize to the exiles and invite them back as liberators and also those who consider all these men indiscriminately as despictable traitors.

Second, we should accept as an ultimate goal the return of the great majority of these young people and their speedy reintergration into American life.

Third, we should recognize that they are neither heros nor traitors. They are simply young people who broke the law for a variety of motives -- some selfish, most idealistic.

Fourth, these young people having broken the law, must face some penalty. Jail would only brutalize or break them. Besides, it is not really a solution since it is an option presently available to them and obviously not one that will bring them home.

We can make progress on this subject by concentrating on the question of what new options should be available.

For example, they might be given the option of working for a year or two on VISTA or at some other public service job. Such an obligation, together with the discomfort of years in exile, would in my view be more than an adequate penalty. But, it would be a penalty with a purpose.

A GRASSROOTS COMMENT

Until the American prisoners are released and the number of patients in the VA hospitals are substantially reduced, there appears to be little chance that the subject of returning exiles will receive serious consideration. They will continue to be "men without a country." -J.C.

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Science has long played a vital role in the courtroom. X-rays, blood tests, photographs, fingerprints—all are familiar ingredients in the judicial process.

But what about the data provided by a modern public opinion poll? Are polls considered scientific enough to be trusted?

To a growing degree, yes. As polling has become more skillful, courts have become less skeptical. The fact remains, however, that the law will take a hard look at any particular poll before putting faith in its findings.

To begin with, the poll must be extensive enough to be significant.

In one case, an accused felon sought a change of venue on the ground that the local populace was prejudiced against him. But the only proof of prejudice was a poll of a few dozen individuals. The court decided that such a poll did not carry enough weight to make its point.

Nor will the results be persuasive if the questioners used "leading questions." A soap company claimed in court that the name of a new chewing gum was so similar to the name of its soap that the public would be confused.

To prove it, the company produced a survey that seemingly did show such confusion. But the questions had been slanted to induce the desired answers. The court decided this poll wasn't worth much either as a means of proof.

Most successfully, polls have been used in trademark cases to ascertain how familiar the public is with a brand name.

Of course, polls will never be as scientific as fingerprints. But when the state of the public mind is at issue, polling can give justice a kind of help it can get in no other way.

County Agent's Notes

Workshop Set For Gardeners

By Bill McCutchen

January 5th is a date you will want to mark on your calendar if you are interested in Vegetable and Flower Gardening or Greenhouse Tomato Production.

Dr. John Chapin, Extension Agronomist from Stephenville and Dr. John Larsen, Extension Horticulturist will be in Cameron for the meeting. The morning session is scheduled for 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. January 5th at the conference room of the First National Bank in Cameron.

Dr. Chapin will cover fertilization of home gardens and Dr. Larsen will cover management for disease control, mulches, irrigation principles, and other topics.

On the afternoon of the 5th there will be atour of tomato greenhouses. If you are interested in going on this tour the group will leave from the County Agents office at 1:30 p.m.

LIVESTOCK SHOW

The Milam County Junior Livestock show needs your support. I can't think of anything that deserves your support more. These 4-H members and FFA members are young men and women who are putting a lot of time, money, and effort into a worthwile project. These youngsters are making things happen and not sitting back watching them happen.

Livestock projects develop a sense of responsibility in a youngster. These projects require attention on bad days as well as good ones and seven days a week. I am firmly convinced that these 4-H and FFA projects mold character.

Not only is your financial help needed in supporting the show; your attendance at the show is also important. Let these youngsters know you are interested by attending the Milam Co. Junior Livestock Show January 15th.

Farming Costs Climb

While gross farm income jumped $17 billion in the 1960s, net income actually decreased $3 billion. Use of modern scientific methods to keep production up to meet the food needs of a growing population has caused the expenses of U.S. farmers to skyrocket. Only through the input of time and labor-saving agricultural efficiency is the farmer able to stay in the business of feeding the nation and the world.

Lodgepole pine siding is available in many patterns.

Alcoa Cites Taylor Men

Two Taylor residents, Arthur Kautz and Garland Sherrill, were lauded for their cost reduction efforts at Aluminum Company of America's Rockdale Works by the plant's Accounting Manager, Douglas R. Laws, in a speech to the Taylor Rotary Club.

The accounting manager explained that Kautz and Sherrill (both are employed in the maintenance department) recently revised a piping system on two plant presses and successfully corrected a stubborn oil leak which can mean a savings of up to $20,000 per year in the cost of hydraulic oil alone.

"The ingenuity and dedication of the plant's greatest resource -- Alcoans -- will be a major factor in the success of the plant's current efforts to reduce production costs and thus attract a larger share of business in the highly competitive aluminum industry," Laws said.

He briefed the Taylor Rotarians on the current aluminum industry picture and described the rising production costs, which are up 10% since 1969. He noted that because of worldwide overcapacity, substantial inventories were now building up at Alcoa smelters and may continue to do so as long as metal at each plant is being produced at a competitive price.

Annual loss from insects and disease in western forests is about equal to 25 percent of the sawtimber harvest in those states.

Economic Stabilization Questions and Answers

Internal Revenue Service

This column of questions and answers on the President's Economic Stabilization Program is provided by the U. S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service. The column answers questions most frequently asked about wages and prices.

Q - Are increases in pay resulting from promotions excluded from the 5.5 percent limitation set by the Pay Board?

A - Bonafide promotions are excluded from the 5.5 percent annual aggregate limitation, since remuneration goes with the job, not the man.

Q - May a retailer who does not have the required display of base prices in his store raise his price?

A - No. The Price Commission specifically requires the retailer to promiently display the base price of all food products unless exempt and - for other than food items - either those 40 items in each department which have the highest dollar sales volume or those items which amount to 50 percent of total dollar sales for the department, whichever is less. These displays must be posted on or before January 1, 1972, and no price increases are allowed until they are posted.

Q - How does a citizen or a firm obtain information or a ruling with respect to the economic stabilization regulations issued during the post - freeze period?

A - The Internal Revenue Service will answer inquiries and issue rulings regarding the stablization program. There are more than 360 IRS offices throughout the country where inquiries and complaints can be made.

Requests for rulings and for exemptions or exceptions to stablization regulations should be in writing and directed to the IRS district office in the area where you live or work. The address for the IRS district office in south Texas is: 300 East Eighth Street, Austin, Texas 78701.

Q - What court action can be taken against an individual or firm that violates a provision of the economic stabilization program?

A - The Justice Department may seek a civil injunction to stop persons from raising prices, wages or rents higher than is permitted. Failure to comply with the injunction would place the violator in contempt of court and subject to civil penalties. In addition, the Economic Stabilization Act provides that upon conviction for a willful violation, a person may be subject to a fine of $5,000 for each violation.

Q - What businesses are subject to prenotification and reporting of their price increases?

A - Firms with annual sales or revenues of $100 million or more are subject to prenotification and reporting. In general, these firms must notify the Price Commission in advance and obtain approval of proposed price increases. In addition, they must file quarterly reports with the Price Commission. Firms with annual sales or revenues between $50 million and $100 million must file quarterly reports with the Price Commission, but they do not need to obtain advance approval of price increases.

Forms for prenotifiers and reporters are available at the local offices of the Internal Revenue Service.

Q - What wage and salary adjustments must be prenotified and approved and what are those that need only be reported?

A - Wage and salary adjustments which affect 5,000 or more employees, and all wage and salary adjustments for employees in construction must be prenotified and approved by the Pay Board before they are made effective.

Wage and salary adjustments which affect from 1,000 to 5,000 employees must be reported to the Pay Board. For this group no prenotification is necessary.

ASCS NEWS

Wheat, feed grain, and cotton farmers who plan to enroll in the 1972 set-aside programs may sign up beginning January 17, according to Douglas Buck, Milam County Executive Director.

January 17 through February 25 is sign-up time at all county ASCS offices for the voluntary farm programs.

Mr. Buck emphasized that the sign-up period is earlier than usual, and also pointed out no extension of the February 25 deadline will be made.

Farmers who know they will be out of the county through the sign-up period may arrange with the county office to sign up in the programs by mail or by other procedure.

To qualify to participate in the ASCS set - aside programs for crops, farmers will set aside 83 percent of the farm's domestic wheat allotment, 25 percent of the feed grain base, or 20 percent of their cotton allotment.

The Agricultural Act of 1970, which established the set - aside concept, has opened the way for major shifts in the patterns of American farming. By using set - aside acreage to limit general overproduction, individual farmers are free to plant the rest of their cropland to crops which will give them the most profit. In 1971, 90 percent of U.S. farmers altered their cropping patterns from their established bases and allotments in order to increase their profits. The set-aside programs encourage this.

Under the 1972 set - aside programs, a participant who complies with the set-aside acreage he has signed up for the maintains his conserving base, is free to plant the rest of his cropland to anything he chooses, except a few crops which are under marketing quotas.

With the set-aside program farmers can decide what and how much to plant on their farms. The only crops under restricted plantings are peanuts, rice, tobacco, extra long staple cotton and sugarcane.

Notices of cotton, wheat allotments and feed grain bases plus projected yields, and payment rates (except cotton) along with leaflets on the various voluntary farm programs offered in Milam County, have been mailed to area farmers.

If farmers have any other question on program participation, County ASC Committee and County ASCS Office officials will be glad to answer them.

Soil Tests Vital To Farm Yields

COLLEGE STATION

The most difficult part of soil testing is finding the time to do it. Now that most crops have been harvested, farmers should take soil samples so they can get a head start on the 1972 crop year.

"It's just as important for farmers to resample and test fields as it is for those who have never tested their soils at all," says C. D. Welch, Extension soil chemist at Texas A&M University.

Soils that were tested 5 or 10 years ago provided farmers with recommended fertilizer rates for optimum profit based on soil fertility levels of the individual fields at that time. "However, these test values may have increased or decreased so that old recommendations no longer fit field and crop conditions," points out Welch.

According to the soil chemist, farmers who use fertilizer successfully have their fields tested every two to five years. This allows for the detection of declines as well as excessive build-upts. If a field is used for intensive production, a soil test should be run more often. This also applies for fields with special problems.

Better soil management may have elevated soil fertility levels. If this is the case, a soil test will indicate the need for less fertilizer, says Welch. If yields above those expected were obtained, an increase in fertilizer application may be needed.

"Soil tests cost only a fraction of what is spent on fertilizer application. It's probably the best investment a producer will make," Welch says. "Money spent on the wrong fertilizer could result in less net profit."

Anyone interested in soil tests can obtain instructions for sampling and mailing cartons at any county Extension office, adds Welch.

TRAPPERS FIRST

Hudson's Bay Company trappers were the first Europeans to see Plains Indians hunting buffalo from horseback. Their accounts were ridiculed by officials and settlers convinced that Indians couldn't ride.

About 4-H

By Danny Phillips

January 15 has been designated as Show day in Milam County according to Ed Laywell, Chairman of this year's Milam County Junior Livestock Show drive. In a recent meeting in Cameron, board members and interested individuals met and discussed ideas and plans for the upcoming show that has become an annual 4-H and FFA event in the county.

This year's show promises to be the biggest and best ever, with increases in all of the shows various departments. Participation will be up some 50 entries over last year's number. Ag teachers and Extension agents estimated that there will be close to 175 entries this year compared to 125 last year. Biggest increases will be in the dairy and breeding beef classes, with a substantial increase in steers.

Funds for the show this year will be raised through the sale of chances on a butcher calf and hog to be given away to the winner of a drawing the day of the show. Tickets will sell for $1 each.

Prize money for the show is higher than most shows due to the efforts and generosity of the businesses and individuals in Milam County. However, with the huge increase in entries, a considerable increase in funds will have to be raised.

Tickets will go on sale the week of December 27 and businesses in the county will be contacted that week for their donations and last minute business deductions. Only a concentrated and generous effort by everyone will insure the success of the show.

Closet Converts To Home Office

An unobtrusive home office or a hideaway hobby room can be added easily by converting a large family room closet and enclosing it with bi-fold louver wood doors.

To hold a music center, writing desk, games, toys and hobby supplies, the closet is filled with shelves of western pine in varied widths.

At Texas Power & Light Company's Trinidad Generating Station between Athens and Corsicana, there's the beginning of what promises to be a mighty good fish story.

The Company and Texas A&M University have set up an experimental catfish farm in the heated-water discharge adjacent to the power plant. This seven-year project will be an in-depth study of intensive catfish farming and its effect on water quality. It will take advantage of the higher temperature and oxygen content found in water used by electric generating plants, both of which factors are beneficial to the growth of fish and other aquatic life.

We think the project has the makings of a mighty good fish story . . . with a very tasty ending.

Mrs. Jimmy Cass, Dwayne and Lisa and Mr. Koye Cass had Christmas dinner in Milano with the Alvin Nelson family. Saturday night the Jimmy Cass family, the Wayne Albrights, Karen and Marsha of Hearne, and the Roy Gene Millers and Regina of Milano and Mr. Earl Hardcastle had supper with Mr. and Mrs. Koye Cass and Ray.

Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Coats, Kerry, Mark, Rickey and Rena and two friends of Tyler and Mr. and Mrs. Olan Coats of Morton spent Christmas with Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Coats, Sherri, Ray and Kevin.

Miss Sandra Slay of Dallas and Mr. and Mrs. Tom Ganhs of Houston spent Christmas with Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Slay and Cheryl and visited other relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Billy Earl Hardcastle and children of Angleton visited relatives during the holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Ely and daughter of Bryan spent Christmas with Mrs. Anna Mae Ely and other relatives.

Everyone in Gause got a Christmas card this year. It came addressed to "The GOOD People of Gause" from Bud and Jackie Andersen and kids. The written message read "wishing everyone the best this holiday season. Love you all" all the way from Garden Grove, Calif.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Harty, their daughter, Lynda, and her two children of Austin and Bastrop visited friends in Gause this week. They made a $10 donation on our cemetery gateway. "We are about ready to start construction, so get your material on the ground in the near future," says Mrs. O. L. Harlen. Cecil Kornegay presented 2000 new brick to finish off the job.

The Christmas party at the Methodist Church was enjoyed by an unusually large crowd. The youth choir furnished beautiful carols. We believe we had something that few parties could claim -- two sets of delightful twins. Mr. and Mrs. Travis Neeley of San Juan and Mr. and Mrs. Terry Collie of Gause are the proud parents of a girl and boy each.

Good Luck Potions To Brighten Prospects For The New Year

By Christine Laws

Good luck potions have been brewed in every age to assure bright prospects for the New Year. But none has endured or possessed the gastronomic appeal of that Southern potion brewed with black-eye peas and hog jowl.

Ever since the Civil War, this folklore about eating black-eye peas on New Year's Day to insure good luck has continued to spread, until now not even Yankees risk their luck without this Southern dish to begin this year.

When this tale first started, thrifty families waited for the last crop of peas to dry on the stalk before picking them, because they had no other way to preserve peas then. After they pecked and shelled the peas, they dried them in the sun before they were stored.

However, today you can enjoy both canned and frozen black-eye peas in a variety of styles, but the purists claim that the best assurance of good luck comes from the old-fashioned dried black-eyes. How tasty they are, simmered with hog jowl or bacon fat and sparked with a few onions and tomatoes!

To assure you of good quality, nearly all dried black-eye peas are officially inspected before or after processing.

Grades are assigned wholesale lots by a grader of USDA's Consumer and Marketing Service or cooperating state agency.

If you can't find packages of peas marked with USDA or state grades, then learn how to be your own "grader" by looking for the same factors an official grader considers.

First look for peas in cellophane bags or other "see through" types of packages, such as cardboard boxes with a cellophane window. Then consider these factors.

1. Brightness of color. Black-eye peas should have a bright uniform color. Loss of color indicates long storage, lack of freshness and a product that will take longer to cook. However, eating quality is not affected.

2. Uniformity of size. You want peas of uniform size because mixed sizes will result in uneven cooking, since smaller peas cook faster than larger ones.

3. Visible defects. Cracked seed coats, foreign material and pinholes caused by insect damage are signs of a low quality product.

Be sure to read the label on the package. By law, it must contain at least this basic information: name and address of manufacturer, packer or distributor; common or usual name of the product and the weight in pounds and ounces.

To learn more about buying, storing and preparing blackeye-peas and other dried peas and beans, send for the new leaflet, "How to Buy Dry Beans, Peas and Lentils", Home and Garden Bulletin No. 177. Copies are free on request from the Milam County Extension Agents office.

HUGE APPLE CROP

Somebody, someplace must have done a most effective job of "wassailing" in the apple orchards, last Christmas eve.

You can reach that conclusion if you believe that old English custom, still popular in some parts of the British Isles. According to tradition, it works like this: The farmers parade to a chosen tree in each orchard where an incantation is invoked and a bowl of cider is dashed against the trunk of the tree. The ceremony is said to discourage evil spirits that cause failure of an apple crop.

Just a quick glance at the size of the 1971 apple crop is enough to convince anyone that the crop was not influenced by any real or imaginary evil spirits. The harvest was most abundant.

That's good news right now because juicy, colorful apples are such a wonderful Christmas fruit. Keep some in the fruitbowl, all through the holiday season. And work them into festive menus to brighten your meals.

To prepare 12 baked apples: Wash, core and pare 12 apples. (Pare just two-thirds of the way down from the stem end.) Place in a well buttered pan. Fill apples, using a mixture of 1 1/2 cups cooked rice and 3/4 cup seedless raisins. Drizzle 3 cups warm maple syrup over the apples. Bake in 400 degree oven until apples are tender, about 45 minutes to 1 hour. Cover the pan for the first half-hour of baking, then remove cover and baste apples with the syrup; continue baking uncovered. Serve warm or cold, but always with a pitcher of cream.

For the Football Fans

Post-Game Supper

In the roll-call of sports, none is as all-consuming for as many fans (31 million of them!) as professional football. The hours when the teams are on the field, and the games are on TV, are sacred to sport in household after household. But there's more to game-time than just watching. Group gatherings of football fans call for food—and more food. Clever culinary game planning calls for made-in-advance buffets built around NFL Training Table Foods; the fact that they're "football's own" seems to add a special savor to the entertainment. The next time the partying is at your house, supplement the expected snacks with a post-game supper featuring Blarney Pie. Add your family's favorite cake, perhaps a nut ring filled with banana-rich cream, plus steaming mugs of coffee—Ovaltine for the youngsters—and you'll win cheers from your fans!

BLARNEY PIE

6 cups shredded cabbage
7 Tbsps. Chiffon Soft-Type Margarine
20 Krispy Crackers, crushed
2 cans (1½ lbs. ea.) Dinty Moore Beef Stew
Salt and Pepper to taste

Cook cabbage in salted water until just tender. Drain. Toss with 3 Tbsps. Chiffon. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Saute crushed crackers in remaining margarine. Ladle hot stew into a large, shallow casserole. Top with a cabbage border garnished with cracker crumbs. To prepare in advance, assemble in casserole without topping. Reheat 10 min. in 300° oven, add topping and serve. Serves 6.

REV. BRASSFIELD AND FAMILY

Missionary Family To Preach In Indonesia

The Rev. Samuel L. Brassfield, a newly approved Assemblies of God missionary to Indonesia, will be guest speaker Sunday, January 2 at 6 p.m. at the First Assembly of God, 1511 North Houston, the Rev. Don Exley, pastor, has announced.

Rev. Brassfield and his wife Nancy will be engaged in evangelism and establishing new churches during their first term of missionary service.

Rev. Brassfield graduated from Southwestern Assemblies of God College in Waxahachie. The Brassfields pastored churches in Cameron and Maypearl, Texas, and more recently in Healdton, Okla., before they were approved for missionary appointment.

The Republic of Indonesia embraces some 6,044 inhabited islands, and is the world's largest archipelago. The island country is the fifth largest nation in the world, having a population of nearly 125 million.

The Brassfield's two children, Suzanne, age 4, and Vanessa, age 10, will accompany their parents to Indonesia.

We all know the feeling of frustration that comes from not finding enough hours in a day. Time to kill is a luxury for most of us.

New Year's reminds us that time is one commodity that cannot be bought. Try as we will, we cannot crowd more than twenty-four hours into a day. Whether it's too much time on our hands or too little, we need constantly to be aware of how we spend our time.

After all, in a hundred years, we'll all be gone. This thought makes current problems look pretty small. Proper balance of work, play and worship makes happier lives. Let God speak to your heart and bring new perspective into your life. Attend church this Sunday.

For New Yard Storage Unit, Select Handy Central Spot

Convenience is the prime ingredient when planning new garden storage—keep it handy to work areas and provide shelves and cabinets so everything has its own place, where it always can be found quickly.

Whether the unit is freestanding or built onto a fence, garage or house wall, it should be well-designed of materials that blend with the surroundings.

One simple but efficient garden work-storage unit adjoins a fence and is built of easily available western wood—4x4-inch cedar posts, 2x4-inch Douglas fir framing, and 1x12-inch boards for siding and shelves.

Boxes, Trellis In Plan

The storage unit consists of two 4x8-foot "boxes" at right angles to the fence, open sides facing each other and the two connected by an overhead trellis of 1x2s to support climbing vines.

One side is used as a potting shed, with work counter and shelves above and storage below for barrels of peat moss or potting soil, and cabinets for sprays and tools. Cabinets should have a lock strong enough to keep children away from harmful chemicals.

The other side has open or closed shelves for storing more tools, equipment, outdoor toys, or supplies for barbecuing. Larger tools may be hung on the fence between the two units.

Add Other Structures

If outdoor storage units are used for potting or other work areas, they should have wood decking or other quick-drying floor for use as soon as desired after a rain.

Storage may be combined effectively with other garden structures, such as pergolas and screens for growing and displaying shade-loving plants, or a gazebo.

But convenience should be considered in the earliest planning stage. Kinds of materials or equipment to be stored will have a bearing on location.

Babson

the elimination of the 10 percent surcharge on imports as a part of the effort to revitalize international commerce took place as expected.

The term "devaluation" implies the probability of a loss of public confidence, along with chaotic business and investment conditions. However, the American public has been conditioned to the prospect of devaluation in recent years, and more particularly over the past year or so. Therefore, since devaluation does not affect the value of consumer purchasing power here at home for domestically produced goods (the loss will be evident in higher prices for foreign goods shipped into this country, and less buying power for Americans traveling abroad), no traumatic or protracted turbulence greeted the devaluation.

It is likely that more equitable trade agreements will be consummated which, with the beneficial aspects of the total currency realignment program should be a net plus factor for the American economy over the next few years. That is, the U.S. should gain a more equitable position in world trade, and also, since our burden of military assistance to the now well - to - do NATO nations is likely to be shared -- albeit grudgingly -- by those countries over which we have held a protective umbrella, the adverse trade and payments balances should post some improvement in 1972.

BUILDING, CONSTRUCTION

The residential building picture "saved the bacon" for 1971. Strength was centered largely in housing and in heavy construction related to the generation of electric power. For all practical purposes, however, home building was the main show in the building field, with an average annual rate equivalent to 2 million units for 1971 compared with 1.4 million units started in 1970. Looking ahead, Babson's reports forecasts that residential building will remain in the forefront of a high level of total building and construction activity. The chief ingredients for sustaining the building boom in housing should again be present during the year ahead: Money and credit for mortgage demand are ample; the cost of long-term credit has backed away somewhat from peak levels; and the rate of new family formations is definitely on the upswing. Indeed, the latter could be accentuated in 1972 if the improvement in business, employment, and personal income picks up as expected.

With the high level of home building expected to persist throughout 1972, the building materials, home furnishings and accessories, and appliance industries should enjoy brisk business in the year ahead. The housing sector of the economy packs a powerful wallop in terms of materials and manpower utilization, and in contributing flow-through strength to related industries. All in all, this will make for a stronger real estate market in the year ahead.

We look for non-residential construction to start slowly but gather steam as 1972 progresses. Because of the delay by Congress in implementing the 7 percent investment tax credit, many businesses have had to "sit on their hands" when it came to large-scale capital expenditures. Furthermore, industrial activity will have to make quite a bit of headway before enough excess productive capacity is absorbed to make businessmen more expansion - minded.

CONSUMER SPENDING

The Babson staff forecasts a good increase in consumer spending for 1972. A beginning of the long-awaited revival in consumer spending was evident during the past year even though, for the most part, retail trade was sporadic and periods of promising gains could not be sustained. In addition, an inordinately high percentage of personal income went into savings in 1971, further fattening the backlog of buying power. With fewer major danger points in the offing, consumers should be much more willing to loosen their purse strings in 1972.

Increases over the past two years in personal consumption expenditures and private domestic investments in residential building have figured very prominently in lifting the American economy above the trillion - dollar gross national product mark. And, in 1972, the GNP should show a net gain approximating 8 percent over 1971's figure in current dollar value, and about 5 percent on a deflated basis.

INCOME & EMPLOYMENT

The emergency freeze and the subsequent controlled economy slowed the upward trend of personal income. Not only were wages frozen, but the rent freeze restrained rental income of individuals and non-corporate entities, while investment income from dividends and interest likewise leveled off. In view of the generous awards approved by the Pay Board, we forecast a resumption of the uptrend in total personal income in the year ahead. Babson's forecast calls for gross personal income in 1972 to average about 8 percent above that of 1971.

This will not all be the result of higher wage rates. Since the second quarter of 1971, total employment has had an upward bias. Unemployment followed a more or less sideways trend during the months of 1971. As economic activity gains strength, we look for employment to show more distinct betterment in 1972. There will be some progress along the line of reducing unemployment, but it will be difficult to shrink the jobless ranks below the 5 percent unemployment rate by year-end 1972, according to estimates of Babson's Reports. Because the labor force is now in a period of accelerated growth, and the military is expected to reduce its manpower requirements further, the task of absorbing new entries into the labor market will be difficult.

BUSINESS PROFITS

Babson's Reports forecasts a gain in after-tax profits approximating 10 percent over 1971. Were it not for some examples of inequitable disparities between wage boosts over price hikes in the initial rulings of the Wage Board and the Price Commission, we probably would have projected a larger increase -- say, somewhat in excess of 15 percent. While profit margins will be controlled, there is still room for net corporate profits to show progress.

This is because a rise in business volume and the benefits of some rather stringent cost-reduction programs enacted over the past two years will permit many corporations to pull down some of the increment in revenues to the profit figure. Also, those companies which had suffered poor earnings in one or two of the past three years can raise prices in order to allow depressed profit margins to assume a healthier status without violating the guidelines.

The ceiling on dividend increases imposed upon corporations which had been disbursing a higher-than-normal rate of cash dividends will, naturally, limit the progress of income for investors. This is another area in which 1972 and its anticipated economic improvement will differ from other years of business rebound.

The limitation on dividend increases will not act entirely to the detriment of investors because many corporations will have no alternative but to plow back more earnings into the business. This will augment their liquidity, further shore up working capital, and enhance capabilities for acquisition, expansion and modernization programs.

TAXES

Taxpayers should experience at least a small degree of relief at the Federal level on income taxes during 1972. However, part of this advantage will undoubtedly be negated at the state and municipal levels, where new or higher levies seem unavoidable for taxation of incomes, personal property, and sales on products and services. But it will be nip and tuck even at the Federal level, unless the improvement in business brings a sudden expansion of revenues from taxes, and unless Federal expenditures can be reduced from currently projected lofty rates. The odds are that, in view of election - year considerations, the danger of a Federal income tax boost will be greater in 1973 than in 1972.

For corporations, restoration of the investment tax credit will yield some tax advantage at the Federal level. In summary, we expect recently enacted tax relief measures to provide some benefit for both individual and corporate taxpayers.

BOND MARKET OUTLOOK

The decline during 1971 was abrupt for short-term money rates, but more gradual at the longer end of the maturity scale. Inasmuch as the economic profile for 1972 is viewed by the Babson staff as one in which the ascent is likely to be solid but gradual, it is not likely that the demand for money and credit will be voracious. But we look for short-term money rates to remain near current levels initially and then exhibit firm-to-higher moves as 1972 progresses. Longer - term interest rates will reflect continuing heavy capital needs at the Federal, state, and local government levels.

Bond prices, therefore, should show some further firming as 1972 unfolds, but any additional increase is likely to be quite limited. Indeed, possibly after midyear, there will be signs of a tightening in credit supplies. Thereafter, the bond market may anticipate a turn back upward in interest rates.

Just how much ground bond prices will give up depends upon the degree of inflationary psychology and the vigor in business capital spending in the second half of 1972. Therefore, while yields on bonds and preferred stocks are considerably lower than at the height of the credit crunch of 1969-70, investors will have a generally favorable climate for making investments in goodquality fixed-income securities.

However, because inflation is likely to persist in 1972, albeit at a restrained pace, those investors who are not obliged to seek the highest current yield possible (safety of principal and income included) may be better off to place some of their funds in convertible securities.

Swiss Beef Roulades

2 pounds round steak, cut ½ inch thick
3 medium-sized carrots, each cut in 6 strips
2 tablespoons flour
1¼ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
⅛ teaspoon garlic powder
3 tablespoons lard or drippings
1 can (8 ounces) tomato sauce
1 small onion, chopped
½ pound fresh mushroooms, sliced
½ cup shredded Cheddar cheese
2 tablespoons chopped parsley

Cut steak into 6 serving pieces and pound to ¼ inch thickness. Place 3 carrot strips on each piece of steak. Season carrots with ¼ teaspoon salt, roll meat around carrots and fasten with wooden picks. Combine flour, 1 teaspoon salt, pepper and garlic powder. Dredge meat in seasoned flour, reserving any excess. Brown roulades in lard or drippings and place in a shallow baking dish. Combine tomato sauce, onion and any reserved seasoned flour and pour over meat. Cover tightly and bake in a slow oven (325°F.) for 1½ hours. Add mushrooms to sauce and sprinkle cheese on top. Cover and continue baking for 20 minutes. Serve sauce over meat and garnish with chopped parsley. 6 servings.
